HIV and AIDS - Counselling - Risk reduction	A trained counsellor / service provider provides client-specific non-directive advice about risk reduction strategies (discussing past risk behaviours and strategies such as the correct use of condoms, encouraging partner testing and the importance of adhering to ARV regimes where relevant), any time a client attends for HIV related services and receives risk-reduction guidance and advice, to empower them to make safe decisions regarding their health behaviour, in a space which allows confidentiality. (There is overlap between pre and post-test counselling and risk reduction counselling. However, risk reduction counselling may be recorded if a client declines a diagnostic test after pre-test counselling, or when their HIV status is already known but they still receive advice on risk-reduction strategies.)	2121010123000
HIV and AIDS - Counselling - Psycho-social support	A trained counsellor / service provider provides client-specific non-directive advice about sources of support, both personal and in the community, when a client is known to be living with HIV so that they are given the opportunity to talk about their diagnosis and emotions, in a space which allows confidentiality. (There is overlap between psycho-social counselling and risk reduction counselling. However, risk reduction counselling may be given whether a client is HIV positive or not and focusses more on positive prevention and behaviour change. Psycho-social support counselling is given only to known HIV positive clients and focusses more on their emotions and psychological state of health.)	2121010124000
HIV and AIDS - Consultation	A trained service provider sees a client and gives comprehensive information about HIV, its transmission, how it differs from AIDS and available services (including those that are not provided by the MA but which can be referred), either for the first time or as a follow up to ensure the client is fully informed, in a space which allows confidentiality. (All clients should be recorded as having a consultation even if they do not take subsequent services. While integrated service provision is vital, clients receiving both HIV and eg STI/RTI services on the same visit should have these services recorded separately.)	2122020200000
